

The Hobart Human Library is a 90-120 minute workshop that can be delivered either in person or virtually using Zoom. For workplaces, there is also a flexible online version which is delivered as six half-hour sessions.

Workshops delivered in person are run like a 'speed dating' forum, with groups of 4 to 6 people 'reading' a human 'book' for 10 to 20 minutes then moving on to another 'book'. Introduction and debrief sessions discuss the links between empathy, stereotyping and discrimination. We also offer an Inclusion Forum, a shorter workshop ideal for larger groups or those looking for a 'taster' of the full Hobart Human Library experience.

COST

These costs are for workshops with 6 'books' (25 adults or 30 students). Other group sizes and durations can be negotiated. Discounts are available for multiple workshops. All prices are GST inclusive.

HOBART HUMAN LIBRARY

Don't judge a book by its cover!

The Hobart Human Library uses the art of storytelling to break down barriers and build empathy. It provides a comfortable space for 'readers' to speak informally with a human 'book'.

The 'books' are Tasmanians who have experienced stereotyping, prejudice or discrimination - perhaps because of their culture, religion, gender, sexual orientation, appearance or wellness. In sharing their personal experiences they hope to educate others about the impact and start conversations about how we can all contribute to positive change.

For workplaces, the human library is an excellent addition to diversity and inclusion training.

*Each 'book' is distinctively interesting and I have learnt so much more than reading articles. Government House professional development workshop participant

For schools, the Hobart Human Library workshop has been developed to support the Respectful Schools and Workplaces Framework.

*That it's an extremely informative, incredible program. It gives you some really amazing insight in diverse peoples' lives. Grade 8 student, Kingston High School

The Hobart Human Library can also be booked for public or private events, including conferences.
